

Ian Hogg was born in Seattle, Washington in 1997 before moving to his parent's home state of Colorado when he was very young. He grew up in Arvada, Colorado where he developed a love of history, fencing, and metal music. He became a Boy Scout, eventually earning the Eagle Scout rank. He attended Lakewood High School where he received his International Baccalaureate diploma. He attended CU Boulder as an undergrad with a major in history and a minor in political science. He graduated Summa Cum Laude with Distinction in 2020. He is currently a Masters student in the History Department at CU Boulder. His current research interests deal with the early modern Atlantic world with a focus on political violence and social movements. His Master's thesis work compares and contrasts early modern European agrarian revolts and Caribbean slave rebellions, specifically how government responses and contemporary discourses differed for both forms of political violence. He has also done some research assistantship work, both in undergrad with Dr. Sarah Sokhey and in graduate school working with Dr. Henry Lovejoy.
